FULL LEASED WIRE REPORT

OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

The State Journal is a member of the Associated Press and receives the full day telegraph report of that great news organization for exclusive afternoon publication in Topeka.

The news is received in the State Journal building over wires for this sole purpose.

Russian affairs in the far east did not improve even after Alexieff got out of the way.

Col. Bryan has lost $450,000 within the past few years through the Connecticut courts and a shortage in votes.

Probably the weather had something to do with delaying moving day at Mukden until ten days after March 1.

Perhaps by this time the Russians have discovered that the report they sent out some time ago regarding the death of Kuroki was incorrect.

Kuropatkin's prediction that terms of peace would be dictated from Tokio probably will prove to be correct but the Japanese will do the dictating.

The increasing treasury deficit may yet prove to be the strongest argument in favor of a revision of the tariff. Lower duties in many cases would result in an increased revenue. Necessities of the government may come to be regarded as paramount to the enrichment of the manufacturers.

Live stock arrivals at Chicago during January aggregated 1,624,214 head, as against 1,549,711 head for a corresponding period in 1903; 30,539 cars being required to handle the 1905 movement, or an average of about 1,600 cars a day, illustrating the enormous equipment required for this single branch of the transportation industry. Shipments for the same months from this city totaled 477,048 head in 1905 and 343,136 head in 1904. Receipts of live stock at Kansas City for the month of January amounted to 511,770 head in 1905 and 457,604 head in 1904. Heavier hog arrivals are largely accountable for the improved condition of the current year's figures.

Shipments for the month, which amounted to 70,173 head, were much smaller than those for the similar month in 1904.

THE DISASTER AT MUKDEN.

The story of the fall of Mukden and the disaster of Kuropatkin's army is told in a few short paragraphs by the Chicago Tribune as follows:

Nogai gripped Kuropatkin's army and held it in a vise, while Kuroki broke its back and Nogai crushed its head. That tells the story of the battle of Mukden.

Nogai marched his army of Port Arthur veterans around behind the screen of battle raised by Oku's attack on the Russian right, and unexpectedly knocked at the gates of Mukden with the bursting shrapnel from his guns.

Nogai attacked Mukden from the west. He chose for his battle ground a bare, treeless plain, twenty miles long and seven miles broad. This plain he converted into an inferno. He sowed the frozen soil with shrapnel and burst shells, fertilized it with melinite, lyddite and shrimose, and irrigated it with Russian and Japanese blood, and then he moved his troops with the scythe-like sweep of six inch guns.

Out to this plain of the inferno went Kuroki and his men, to be welcomed by a hail of shrapnel and Russian divisions were reduced to brigades, brigades to regiments, regiments to companies, companies to squads. Nogai's men had no shelter. The soil was frozen too deep for earthworks, and so they piled up their dead in heaps and fought their enemy from behind ramparts of human bodies.

For six days and nights Nogai's men clung to that inhospitable expanse of brown frozen earth—not only clung there but extending their lines, inch by inch, to the northward, until they reached out and covered with their guns the railroad that was Kuropatkin's line of retreat to the haven of refuge at Tie piao. Finally they cut and destroyed that road.

Oyama has other generals. There is Oku, who swept over ground mines, through barbed wire entanglements, and drove the Russians from the fort crowned slopes of Nanshan heights. There is Nogi, who carried the rebuffs in front of Liaoyang. There is Kuroki, who from the beginning of the war has scarred and seared and seamed the Manchurian landscape with battle all the way from the Yalu to the Hun.

But above all these there is Nogai—who fought and tunneled and blasted his way into Port Arthur, who destroyed a fleet of battleships, who captured fifty of the strongest forts ever constructed by a military engineer, and who turned the Russian flank at Mukden.

No wonder Nogai's men swept the Russians from that treeless plain west of Mukden. They would not be denied. They went into battle shouting, in Russian:

"Out of the way for us. We are Nogai's men. We are from Port Arthur."

Eastern trunk line movements of grain from Chicago and Chicago points during the first four weeks in January totaled 11,250,000 bushels, as against 9,850,000 bushels for similar weeks in 1904. The heaviest shipments occurred in the first week of the month, during which time the railroads handled 3,615,000 bushels of all kinds of grain. East bound flour withdrawals for a similar period amounted to 475,342 bushels, being about 270,000 bushels greater than the movement for 1904. Provision shipments, by a like comparison, show a decided decrease, being 99,688 tons in 1905 and 124,445 tons in 1904.

THE RISE IN STOCKS.

An extraordinary rise has taken place in stocks during the past 12 months. February and March were the lowest months for the majority of active stocks in 1904, and since then the leading shares have advanced from 25 to 100 points; some having doubled in value during that period. Here are the advances in a few of the active stocks, compared with the low prices of 1904:

"What has happened to practically double the value of Erie, Reading, Southern and Union Pacific in that time?" asks Henry Clews in the Financial Review and then proceeds to reply to his own question as follows: "No doubt some of the shares in the list were unduly depressed a year ago, and some of them have actually enjoyed a very large measure of prosperity; but no experienced financier pretends that improved conditions justified such an unusual advance as the above indicates. We have already fully discounted all the prosperity in sight, and the stock market would be quite ripe for a reaction were it not for the generally satisfactory condition of business, for easy money and the consequent strong temper of optimism which prevails everywhere, and which at any time may easily run into a state of dangerous over-confidence. Just now the market presents a strong front, owing to skillful manipulation by the professional element, although there are contingencies in sight which might bring about a reaction when least expected. Money rates have continued easy so long that no apprehension of difficulty exists in that quarter; yet there is a drift in tendencies that calls for watchfulness, even in this direction."

GARFIELD IS COMING.

Will Hold Star Chamber Investigation of Oil Situation.

Washington, March 14.—James R. Garfield, commissioner of corporations, will be in the Kansas oil field personally to direct the investigation of his special agents in less than two weeks' time. Mr. Garfield will leave Washington tomorrow and after a few days in New York, Ohio and Chicago will reach Kansas City. From there he will go into the oil fields, whatever may be the desire of the oil producers and their latest acquisition, Frank Monnett, the discredited Standard Oil trustee of Ohio. Mr. Garfield will not hold "open court" sessions unless he greatly changes his mind from now on.

Mr. Garfield will visit Topeka and will confer with Governor Hoch and Attorney General Doremus, and with Seth Wells, auditor of state, who lives in the oil sections, and is familiar with the situation. The commissioner of corporations will then visit Chanute, Independence and other points in the oil field sending his special agents here and there.

Mr. Garfield is not at all disconcerted by the resolutions of the Kansas senate against him and his beef trust investigation. He knows that in spite of the effort made to convict him, his independence and other points in the oil field sending his special agents here and there.

HE COULDN'T WIN.

Niedringhaus' Successor Fails to Secure Enough Votes.

Jefferson City, Mo., March 14.—In the ballot on United States senator most of the Niedringhaus strength was thrown to Judge Seldon P. Spencer of St. Louis, who was chosen as a compromise candidate last night in the Republican caucus. The vote was not elective, as a majority of 52 was necessary to a choice. Seven pairs were announced. The ballot read:

Spencer, 61; Niedringhaus, 5; Cockrell, 75; Bartholdt, 2; Warner, 1; Kerens, 17. When the result of the ballot was announced there was considerable excitement in the house which was crowded with spectators in the expectation that the deadlock that has existed since January 18, might be broken. As the balloting proceeded the Kerens supporters held together for their candidate but the Niedringhaus forces turned to the compromise candidate, Spencer, with the exception of five.

No election resulting another ballot was ordered. This resulted in a loss of one vote for Niedringhaus and a gain of three for Spencer. Warner dropped out and Kerens lost one vote. However, the vote was not decisive. It stood: Spencer, 54; Niedringhaus, 4; Cockrell, 74; Bartholdt, 2; Kerens, 16. The Democrats then tried to force a dissolution of the joint session, the Kerens men voting with the Democrats.

HEARINGS TO BEGIN.

On Railroad Rate Question by Committee on April 17.

Washington, March 14.—Chairman Elkins of the senate committee on interstate commerce announced today that the committee will begin hearings on the railroad rate subject Monday, April 17.

She Wore His Rust in Gold.

A pretty blond young woman caused considerable excitement at a dinner party given recently by showing off her engagement present from her fiancé. "We did not like the old fashioned idea of giving rings," she calmly announced, to the horror of a couple of sentimental girl friends, "so each of us had a gold hunt of our head and shoulders made, which we presented to each other. Harold wore his as a watch chain, and I am wearing mine, as you see, on the gold chain around my neck. Would you like to look at it?" and the prospective bride passed around the cherished features of "Harold" done in gold.

There was something of a thrill of disapproval at the sight of the bust, and some criticism of the bold display of the features of the lover.

"I've heard about wearing your heart on your sleeve," said an old lady in a lace cap, "but it's the first time I've ever seen any one bold enough to wear her sweetheart's head around her neck."—Chicago Tribune
